

THE ALLIANCE TO RECLAIM OUR SCHOOLS

April 27, 2017

To: The Honorable Paul D. Ryan, Speaker of the House
The Honorable Nancy Pelosi, Minority Leader
The Honorable Mitch McConnell, Majority Leader
The Honorable Charles E. Schumer, Minority Leader
Members of the U.S. House of Representatives
Members of the U.S. Senate

We are parents, students, educators and advocates for public schools across the country. We strive each day to ensure that our schools are places where tolerance and democracy are taught along with reading and writing—places where children from all walks of life come together to learn, and where students and educators feel safe and supported.

Together, we represent 7 million Americans. On May 1st, the Alliance to Reclaim Our Schools (AROS) will be mobilizing our members, along with hundreds of thousands of others, to deliver a clear message to the nation, the Congress and the President: We will not be divided by hate and fear.

Over the past 100 days, tens of thousands of U.S.-born children, DACA-mented individuals, immigrant children and families have lived with constant fear and insecurity caused by the President's targeting of Muslims, refugees and undocumented immigrants. His words, his initiatives and his policy proposals are eroding the trust built by educators, parents, law enforcement and communities over decades.

Today, and on May 1, we are asking Congress to stop the assault on our neighbors, our families, our students and our schools. We are calling on you to build schools, not walls.

This is personal. These are real people and this is real fear:

A teacher in Milwaukee said that one of her second graders crawled in to her lap crying. He told her, “I am so scared that somebody is going to take my daddy away.”

These are the words of a six year old child, crying and afraid in school.

His teacher says, “You can’t teach like that. You can’t learn like that.”

Yet classrooms are being impacted all across the country by stories like this. Our schools and communities are being permeated with fear.

Public schools are the cornerstone of our civic and economic infrastructure. Their work is already complicated enough. Yet schools in low-income communities, and in predominantly African American and immigrant neighborhoods have struggled for too long with a lack of resources. For decades, these schools have been asking for up-to-date technology and textbooks. Even on the most routine of days, we need more counselors, more social workers, more nurses. And now, on top of that, our schools are threatened with immigration raids and deportations. Teachers can’t teach like that. Students can’t learn like that. Parents can’t provide for families under these conditions.

Now, President Trump is proposing to build a 1,200 mile wall along the Mexican border—a boondoggle project that is unsupported by fact¹ and preposterous in its grandiosity. The Department of Homeland Security has projected that the wall would cost $21.6 billion.² A new report released last week puts that figure at nearly $70 billion.³

We unequivocally condemn this wall, and we unwaveringly denounce the politics of fear and division that have swept over this nation in the last 100 days.

Instead of separating families and building walls, we must invest in our schools as part of our nation's infrastructure. Stronger schools are schools where teachers have the tools they need to teach, students have access to a broad and rich curriculum, and where families and students are welcomed, supported, engaged and safe. Investing in our schools means making sure that every school—and every student—has access to this kind of learning environment. And it means lifting the cloud of fear that hangs over too many communities right now.

Nearly 100 school districts and over 200 institutions of higher education have passed resolutions declaring schools safe havens against ICE raids. These districts are standing up for their students. They are standing up for the 14th Amendment of the Constitution, and for the legal right each child has to an education. We stand with them.

We will be marching and rallying on May 1. Join us in our cities and states, and then lead us to a stronger, safer, unified nation.

- Reject the wall. Period. The nation can't afford to spend billions of dollars on a wall. Say no to the wall.
- Stop the deportations. Tell ICE to stay out of our schools. End the separation of families. Protect DACA and DREAMers. Refuse to spend the $6 billion requested to triple the number of ICE officers. Provide real leadership by introducing legislation to fix our broken immigration system.
- Protect funding for public education. The President has proposed slashing $9 billion from the U.S. Department of Education and ending federal funding for after-care programs, community schools, teacher training and other critical supports.
- Invest in public schools, particularly those serving African American and Latino children. AROS is demanding 10,000 sustainable community schools across the country—schools that have the resources and wraparound supports that children need to succeed.
- Say no to vouchers. We oppose public funding of unaccountable private and religious schools. Programs that funnel taxpayer dollars to privately managed schools siphon much-needed resources from our public schools.

Build Schools, Not Walls.

The under-signed organizations will be coming together with hundreds of others on May 1st to denounce the President's attack on immigrants. Our organizations will be calling on you – our elected representatives – to stop the deportations. Stop the wall, and instead invest in our classrooms.

Signed,

Keron Blair, National Director, Alliance to Reclaim Our Schools
